WILLIAMS TELLS HOW HE KILLED HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW

Bucks Countyman Says Sister Offered Him $500 for Job

BATTLED ON THE BED Victim Came Near Getting the Best of It, He Says

By David P. Sentner
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27.—(INS)—The confession of Harold Williams of how he killed William Prophet at the suggestion of his sister, Mrs. Clara Grace Prophet, will be laid down today by the prosecution at the trial of the 25-year-old farmer for the slaying. Mrs. Prophet, husband of the victim, is serving a life prison term for complicity in the murder plot.

Williams, sentenced to the electric chair, secured a new trial on the ground that he did not have an opportunity to present testimony regarding "the hidden motive."

Police Inspector William Connelly, star witness for the state, was slated to testify regarding the confession. Both sister and brother admitted their guilt 12 hours after their attempt went awry to make the murder appear as if committed by a burglar.

In the confession, Williams tells of how his sister offered him $500 to rid her of her husband. He relates obtaining the key to the Prophet home from his sister, creeping up the stairs shortly before dawn, and standing over Prophet as he slept.

"I stood over him for about five minutes trying to make up my mind," the confession reads. "Then I thought my sister expected me to kill him. So I started choking him. We battled all over the bed and Prophet started getting the best of it. I hit him on the jaw with the butt of the gun. Then I shot him."

The defense contends that Williams was temporarily insane over alleged ill treatment received by his sister at the hands of her husband.

The defendant's sister is scheduled to be brought from prison to testify that her husband "nagged her" and did other things which made her consider committing suicide.

The prosecution has introduced testimony in an attempt to prove that Williams and his sister plotted the death of Prophet in order to get $3200 life insurance money and so that Mrs. Prophet could be "rid of her matrimonial bonds."

The jury judging the case is composed of twelve husbands and fathers, almost all of whom have sisters.

Contrary to original plans, Judge Harry S. McDevitt announced today that night court sessions will be held to speed the Commonwealth's prosecution in the case of Williams.

Assistant District Attorney Curren indicated at the opening of court he may fight an attempt of Samuel Moyerman, defense counsel, to put Mrs. Elizabeth Curvan, of Wildwood, N. J., so-called "mystery witness" and former wife of William Prophet, who Williams is accused of murdering, on the stand.

In replying to a direct question he said: "It remains to be seen whether she will ever get on the stand or not."

It is rumored in city hall that Chief of County Detectives William Connelly has investigated the early stages of Mrs. Curvan's life and Curren is prepared to put up a stiff fight on the basis of Connelly's findings.

The new court schedule for the trial will be as follows: 10 a. m. to 12 noon; 1 p. m. to 5 p. m.; 7 p. m. to 9 p. m.

Make Transfusions; Effort To Save J. Wheeler's Arm

James Wheeler, mansion street, was removed from the Harriman Hospital to the Hahnemann Hospital, Philadelphia, yesterday, where an effort is being made to save his left arm.

Infection resulted when, while playing basketball at Beaver Fire Co. hall, Wheeler's arm came in contact with the jaw of Joseph Lombardo, a pivot tooth became imbedded in the member and Wheeler by means of a match stick loosened the tooth. Aggravated infection occurred. Wheeler was at the local hospital one day.

Blood transfusions were made at the Philadelphia institution yesterday.

The lad's mother and father both submitted to blood tests but the father's was taken and this morning it was reported that young Wheeler was doing very nicely. His parents will go to the hospital again today.

Several friends have volunteered to give of their blood if it is required.

In Shadow of Noose

Here are three unusual studies of Mrs. Ruth Judd, accused of the slaying and dismemberment of her two friends, Agnes Le Roi and Hedvig Samuelson, as she attentively listened to the evidence in court at Phoenix, Ariz. The accused woman is preserving a calm demeanor while her attorneys battle for her life. They are hoping to prove that Mrs. Judd was not mentally responsible at the time of the crime.

HOME'S SANCTITY WAS DEFENDED BY EDW. ALLEN

This Will Form Basis for The Defense in Trial of Young Slayer

"JUSTIFIED IN BLUFF"

By Dorothy Ducas
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1932, by I. N. S.)

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 27.—(INS)—A boy, beside himself with resentment at the intrusion of threatening strangers into his home, brandished a gun—and somehow it went off.

That will be the defense offered for Edward H. B. Allen, youthful slayer of his sister's sweetheart, Francis A. Donaldson, 3rd.

International News Service learned today that the story of a murder to avenge the honor of Rose E. W. Allen, Eddie's sister, will not form the basis of the lad's defense, when he comes to trial next Monday. Instead, self-defense, turned to tragedy, will be the theme of young Allen's explanation of the murder.

Contention of Horace Allen, father of the accused man, that Donaldson seduced 18-year old Rose probably will form no part of the defense. Rose never has corroborated her father's revelation that she spent a week-end with Donaldson in Scranton, Pa., and rumor has it that she will deny it from the witness stand when she is called to testify by the state.

But Eddie Allen was justified in his bluff that ended in the shooting of Donaldson on November 9, Allen's attorneys will declare. He was defending the sanctity of his home.

He had ordered his sister's suitor and Albert H. G. Lucas, Donaldson's friend, to leave the apartment and they had refused.

Enraged, Eddie called the doorman of the Green Hill Farms Hotel, and asked him to put the intruders out. The doorman begged him not to "make a scene." Eddie then tried to see the manager of the hotel only to meet the same lack of cooperation. In desperation he remembered his gun, left with a friend in a suburb four miles away. That would frighten the insolent callers!

Eddie never raised his gun to firing position, he will declare it exploded while in a "carry" position at his hip, and Donaldson fell, mortally wounded.

The defense will base its case on the theory a man has no right to enter another's home, as Donaldson is said to have done, to instruct him how to treat his daughter. Rose had left home earlier that day, swearing she never would return because her father and brother forbade her to see Donaldson, with whom she was in love. Donaldson's friend Lucas declared at the coroner's inquest last November Donaldson went to the Allen apartment on the fatal night to play "peacemaker" for Rose.

Young Allen will say Donaldson was abusive in his language, arrogant and dictatorial.

His own cut lip was eloquent evidence of the physical violence that preceded the shooting.

The boy today is sallow, silent and anxious to have the trial over with, it was said. Only his father and (Continued on Page 4)

TWO YOUNG MEN ARE SENTENCED TO PENITENTIARY, BOY ON PROBATION, FOR PART IN OVER 20 ROBBERIES

Minimum Sentence for One of Trio in All of 23 Offenses Not Less Than 101 Years — Good Character Testified To

Two young men and a boy arrested recently by State Police of the Doylestown sub-station for the part they took in 20 or more robberies and burglaries in central Bucks County, were before the court at Doylestown yesterday after entering pleas of guilty. Two were sentenced to the Eastern State Penitentiary and the boy was released on three years' probation.

In pronouncing sentence, President Judge Hiram H. Keller made it plain that the public must be protected. The very minimum sentence that he could have imposed on one of the men had he sentenced him on each of the twenty-three offenses, would be not less than 101 or more than 202 years in prison. The other young man could have received 42 to 86 years on a minimum sentence.

Those who pleaded guilty and their sentences are as follows:

LeRoy Stumpf, 20, who spent considerable time at the home of Charles E. Fell, Southampton; sentenced to not less than five years or more than ten years in the penitentiary.

Charles E. Fell, 30, Southampton, sentenced to serve not less than three or more than six years in the penitentiary.

John Russell, 17, step-son of Fell, living in Southampton; sentence was suspended and Russell placed on probation for three years in charge of Probation Officer Antonio Russo, of Bristol.

Before pronouncing sentence, Thomas Ross, of Doylestown, counsel for Fell, who brought a large number of very reputable character witnesses to court in his behalf, asked Judges Keller and Boyer to suspend sentence in his case.

"You might just as well forget that now," Judge Keller remarked to Mr. Ross, who then asked that his client be sent to the Bucks County Prison instead of the Eastern State Penitentiary.

John L. DuBois, of Doylestown, who represented Rumpf, asked for no leniency but asked the Court to take into consideration that it was his contention that Rumpf was led on by a stronger mind which in this case, was Fell's wife, a woman of fifty-one years.

The boy, Russell, stood alone. He was without counsel and did not speak a word during the entire hearing. He simply buried a typewriter in the ground after it had been stolen by Fell and Rumpf, and he never took part in any of the actual thefts.

Just as the boy was about to be sentenced, his sister, Mrs. Lois Matthews, took the stand and informed the judges that she would be willing to take charge of her brother, Mrs. Matthews' husband is an assistant foreman at the Pitcairn Flying Field, Hallowell. Her plea for her brother resulted in sentence being suspended in his case.

GRANT TWO DIVORCES

Two divorces were granted yesterday morning in the Court of Common Pleas by Judge Hiram H. Keller at Doylestown. Anna M. Brozowski, of Nockamixon township, was granted a divorce from Walter J. Brozowski, of 1122 South Second street, Philadelphia. (Continued on Page 4)

NUMEROUS CASES IN MISCELLANEOUS COURT

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 27.—Winfield Curtis, 53 North Water street, Trenton, was fined $200 and costs and sent to the county prison for thirty days yesterday for operating an automobile while drunk in Carversville. He was also charged with operating an automobile after his license had been revoked.

When arrested by a State Highway Patrol officer, Curtis was operating on his dead brother's license. The license of Winfield Curtis had been revoked in New Jersey for drunken driving two years ago.

Sentence was imposed by Judge Hiram H. Keller after Curtis had pleaded guilty.

A petition of taxpayers of Solebury township was filed yesterday in Quarter Sessions Court in which the appointment of Daniel R. Hendricks is desired by the petitioners. Hendricks was elected in 1929 but never filed the necessary bond, and the position was never filled by him.

Claiming they are considerably arrested Fell, Stumpf and Russell, was a Commonwealth witness. He read confessions made by Fell and Rumpf and implicated two others who are fugitives from justice but are being sought, one of them being a fourth-time offender in New York state and well acquainted with Stumpf, Russell and Fell's wife.

Trooper Reilly testified that over twenty places including houses, roadside stands, coal bins, gasoline tanks and miscellaneous buildings were robbed during the past two months. Stumpf pleaded guilty to twenty-three different offenses and Fell to ten. In most cases the goods have been recovered and returned to the owners.

Trooper Reilly testified that Stumpf told him that Mrs. Fell, wife of Charles, planned a number of the offenses and actually took him out on Sundays in an automobile on several occasions and pointed out places to him that would be "good to rob."

Stumpf testified that his father is Joseph Stumpf and that early last summer he started this "robbing business." He said that he had been living at Fell's in Southampton two or three days a week. He testified that Mrs. Fell had no bad influence over him. He first got acquainted with Fell after he had met Ruth Fell, twenty-three, a step-daughter.

MORRISVILLE COUNCIL TO HAVE ACTIVE YEAR

New Committees Plan to Organize for Work of Borough

IMPORTANT MATTERS

MORRISVILLE, Jan. 27.—With a number of important matters to be considered during the coming year, the various committees of Common Council just announced by President A. T. Lynch, are planning to organize for active work in the various borough branches.

The Fire Protection Committee, which includes Charles C. Young, chairman; Frank Baker and John G. Bleasdale, has the matter of looking into the advisability of the new city service fire truck for Union Company. Members of Union Company voted unanimously last night for a Seagrave machine and the council committee will advertise immediately for such an apparatus. Bids will be received at the February meeting of council.

The police committee, which has Hiram H. Johnston as chairman, Frank Braker, Harry M. Lair and George W. Burgner as members, will have several important matters such as additional police protection and traffic regulation at North Pennsylvania avenue and Trenton avenue, to consider.

The street committee, with Harry M. Lair as chairman, Arthur D. Forst, Jr., George W. Burgner and Hiram H. Johnston as members, is not likely to do any permanent roadwork this year but there will be plenty of temporary repairs to keep this committee busy. The committee will soon begin an improvement on South Pennsylvania avenue below Cleveland avenue where the thoroughfare will be cut back to enable pedestrians to walk here without going out into the street. Both sides of the street are to be cut back. This improvement will be greatly welcomed by parents of children attending Manor Park School. At present these children must cross the street several times but with the walks laid out it will not be necessary for many of them to cross this dangerous highway (Continued on Page 4)

FEAR FOR "SUBS" CREW

FATHER TO TAKE STAND

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 27.—Rev. Harvey Joy McKinnell, aged and careworn father of Winnie Ruth Judd, prepared to take the witness stand today to help save the life of his daughter. He expected to be called to the stand immediately after his wife, Carrie McKinnell, finishes her cross-examination at the hands of the prosecution in the trial of Mrs. Judd for the "trunk murder" of Agnes Ann Lerol. With Dr. McKinnell's testimony and the testimony of his wife, defense attorneys will continue to build up Ruth's defense of insanity. When the aged parents have finished rattling the family skeleton, defense will throw a barrage of medical testimony to prove that Ruth Judd did not know right from wrong, if she committed the crime, and that not only is her mentality impaired, but her physical ailments are responsible for her mental condition. Among the men of science to take the stand for Ruth will be several noted alienists.

GET BECHTEL CLUE

Philadelphia, Jan. 27.—The first tangible clue in the investigation of the murder of Norman S. Bechtel, young Mennonite church worker, was in the hands of the police today. The clue was a weather-worn key-ring bearing a card on which appeared the partly obliterated name and address of a woman. On the card, torn and dirty, was a smudged note that appeared to be "Miss K—" another read "Wissa—" and "Hor—" Police believe the name is either Miss Kadie or Miss Kathie and the address they maintain is "Wissahickon Avenue" and "Hortor Street," a block from the Stokes estate where the mutilated body of Bechtel was discovered and where the key-ring was found.

CONVICTS ESCAPE

Florence, Ariz., Jan. 27.—Hiding in an empty oil truck, seven convicts escaped from the Arizona State Prison today. It was the fifth time that Jack Hunter, 35, serving a long term for a murderous assault, has escaped in recent years.

SIX CANAL BRIDGES ARE TO BE IMPROVED

State to Preserve Aesthetic Features of the Ancient Spans

WILL BE MADE SAFE

Six narrow bridges spanning the old Lehigh Coal and Navigation Canal, now part of the recently created Roosevelt Park, between Yardley and Raubsville, have been cited by Secretary of Highways Sam S. Lewis for immediate improvement. The work is to get under way immediately to provide employment for nearly 100 men.

The bridges listed for repair and improvement are posted for a two-ton maximum load and reduced speed. Constant inspection has been maintained as a traffic safeguard while plans were prepared. Most of the old bridges have been in service a century or longer and were not in keeping with modern traffic demands, the highway chief said.

Engineers in charge of the improvements have been ordered to preserve or duplicate the aesthetic features of the ancient spans. This is in keeping with almost unanimous local sentiment. When Governor Pinchot spoke at the formal transfer and dedication of the canal and park, he expressed a desire that, in meeting modern traffic conditions, the atmosphere of a romantic period in transportation history be preserved as a memorial and landmark.

A unique feature of the old bridges is the camelback design, once found in many old bridges throughout the State which have rapidly been replaced with expansion of the road system. The camelback is to be retained in the canal bridges.

BRIDGEWATER RESIDENTS ALARMED OVER TWO RECENT FIRES BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN OF INCENDIARY ORIGIN

Large Barn on P. M. DeWitt Property and Three Automobiles Are Destroyed—Loss Estimated at $6,000—Reynolds Dwelling Burned January 8th, a $6,000 Loss

Pity the Bambino

Determined that friend hubby is not going to outdo her either in boxing skill or in the matter of eliminating excess poundage, Mrs. George Herman Ruth, the former Claire Hodgson of the stage and wife of the bouncing Bambino, is shown as she took a lesson in the many art. Mrs. Ruth is training under the supervision of Artie McGovern, in New York, where her famous husband also limbers up.

An arson fiend is at large in the vicinity of Bridgewater, is the opinion of residents in that section, where two large fires have occurred since January 8th. Both fires are believed to have been of incendiary origin and a close watch is to be kept upon premises there.

Last night a large barn on the property of the late P. M. DeWitt was gutted and three automobiles destroyed, although the blaze was discovered quickly the structure was doomed as the flames spread rapidly.

The barn about 40 by 60 feet and three stories high was of stone-stable high type. The entire upper floors were gutted and the siding burned away but the entire frame-work withstood the flames, something unusual. This was said to be due to the excellent type of construction, the frame being pegged instead of nailed.

The flames were discovered at about 8.15 by Thomas Cahill. At that time it is said the blaze appeared to be in the top of the barn. Mr. Cahill summoned fire companies from Croydton and Cornwells Heights. Bristol Fire Company, No. 1, also got the alarm.

County Fire Marshal William L. Stackhouse was called, and after making a preliminary investigation, said he believed the fire to be of incendiary origin and placed the loss between $5,000 and $6,000.

Mrs. DeWitt, owner of the property, was at Magnolia, N. J., visiting at the time of the fire.

Another fire of incendiary origin completely destroyed the large dwelling and contents of Miss Anna Reynolds, just a short distance below the DeWitt place on January 8th.

Four Get Minor Injuries When Three Trucks Crash

Four men received minor injuries last night when three trucks figured in a collision on the Lincoln Highway at Oxford Valley.

Earl Lehman, of Wrightstown, was driving toward Philadelphia and Edward Davis, of New York, was proceeding toward Trenton when their machines crashed. Davis' truck turned over and Lehman's struck a guard rail, ripping up 15 posts. Another truck, driven by George M. Reed, of Ellendale, Del., crashed into the wreckage and turned over.

Lehman received several bruises and W. A. Miller, of York, who was riding with him, received cuts of the head and face. Davis was cut about the left knee and Reed on the right hip. The four victims were treated by Dr. Henry B. Lovett, of Langhorne.

State Highway Patrolmen McAfee and Lohr investigated.

A BIG STAKE IN PROSPERITY

Whatever may be the correct policy respecting participation in European political activities, the United States must continue to have an increasingly greater interest in all things that affect the prosperity of other nations. The world is intensely interested in the report that all the people of the United States might ride at once in the automobiles owned in the country. The notion goes with the rumor that in some way American prosperity and progress and influence are connected with that phenomenal influence and achievement in privately owned transportation.

The United States has a ratio of 4.87 persons to one automobile, while the rest of the world would have to crowd 247 persons into every one of its motor cars to take the hypothetical inclusive trip. That shows the possibilities of the developing foreign market, for the American automobile is famed around the world. "It is making progress in Egypt, Turkey, Syria, Africa and China," says a writer on world economic conditions. "It would be difficult to find a country between the Arctic and the Antarctic circles that it has not invaded."

"But," adds this writer, "low purchasing power and poor roads are the principal handicaps, not only in the backward countries but in the highly civilized ones."

That points to the stake of America in the prosperity of the rest of the world. Purchasing power in Egypt, in Africa, in Turkey and every other country means exports of American road machinery and motor cars and trucks and farm utensils and all the gear that goes with the promotion of higher standards of living.

IMPORTANCE OF SPELLING

"Spelling bees" commonly designated as "old-fashioned"—are coming back into their own in all parts of the country and with all ages. Properly enough, newspapers are giving them front page space and organizations dedicated to serious aims are sponsoring them.

Revival of these competitions between spellers reflects a revival of public interest in spelling, which, along with the three R's, has been neglected of late, according to a popular suspicion.

When business men criticize the public schools, colleges and commercial schools their criticisms are usually directed against the poor spelling of the products of these institutions of learning. And yet a great many successful business and professional men would be painfully embarrassed in the composition of their correspondence if competent stenographers were not available and a great many of the latter would be handicapped if a copy of Webster were not constantly at hand.

Those older heads who pride themselves on their spelling powers and invite challenges from the younger generation to "spell them down" may be indulging in their vanity without warrant, just as the "little red school house" once laid false claims to superiority over city schools. But the misspelled words of yesteryear do not excuse the present epidemic of bad spelling.

"The GAY BANDIT of the BORDER"

by TOM GILL

COPYRIGHT 1931 BY INTERNATIONAL MAGAZINE CO., INC. — DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

SYNOPSIS

Ted Radcliffe is called to Verdi, a small village on the Mexican border, by Bob Harkness, his late father's friend. Radcliffe Senior had lost a fortune in Mexico years before. At a party given by Major Blount of the U. S. Army, Ted meets Paco Morales, ruling power of Mexico, and his beautiful niece, Adela. Morales tells how El Coyote, the mysterious bandit, killed a man about to reveal his hideaway. El Coyote steals from the rich, particularly Morales, and gives to the poor. Major Blount announces that the U. S. cavalry will join in the search for the bandit. A wounded Mexican, believed to be one of El Coyote's band, is captured. Ted is stunned to learn his father died penniless. Bob attributes the failure of Ted's father's Mexican irrigation project to Morales, whose reign would have ended with its success.

CHAPTER X

Ted made no answer. He looked again at the letter, and for a moment everything seemed swept from beneath his feet. His future plans, his hopes, had been dashed away. He was a pauper. The thought made him look up. "Two hours ago I thought I was a rich man. I could command wealth. I could do with my life just what I wanted. Now I'm a charity guest of yours. Why, I haven't five hundred dollars to my name, and I can't stay here."

Bob shook his head. "You've got to stay here. Ted, if you go before we've had a chance to talk and plan, I'll think rather poorly of my old friend's son. We'll build again, you and I. For the next week we'll ride and talk and lay our campaign. I can do something, old man. You've got to let me."

Caught up by the earnestness in the man's voice, Ted laid both hands on Bob's shoulder. "Thank God you are here. It's all so unreal. And tonight I can't see much ahead."

A dying ember clattered noisily on the hearth. Bob walked toward the door and once more his voice had recovered its old matter-of-fact quality.

"There's rye and Scotch in that cabinet, Ted. You've been through a dark place in your life tonight and in a few hours it will be dawn. Let's think of it as a real dawn. Meanwhile, I've got something that has to be done before the sun rises so don't wait up."

Again Radcliffe's eyes watched the graying logs. He seemed to be talking to the fireplace. "Queer," he said, "I can't feel sorry for dad. I can't find pity for him. He was too fine for pity."

But the quiet voice only answered: "I think I know your father even better than you. And I know, too, something of the feeling that makes a gambler of a man, and makes him willing to stake everything, perhaps even the things he has no right to stake. And now, good night."

The footsteps of Don Bob died down the path. Within the house it had grown suddenly cold. A resolute branch of mesquite hissed noisily and still the man stood brooding before the hearth, with somber, unseeing eyes fixed on the flickering fire.

A chapter closed. The chapter of his first youth had closed. For the first time a sense of the great uncertainty of life came over him, a sense of the vast, unreasoning tyranny of fortune. At last, something like a sigh escaped him, and turning away he dropped his cigarette among the dying coals.

All life would be different now.

Doors were closing on him that had once been opened wide. He looked up. Well, one had to sleep. Even paupers. But at the door of the bedroom he looked back and raised his clenched hand toward the unheeding darkness outside.

"You got dad, damn you," he said slowly. "Now let's see if you can get me."

For Ted that night always remained a memory of racing, waking thoughts; a nightmare of fantastic dreams. His life, the life that had been forever taken away, passed before him in confusion: the days of poverty on the streets of Denver, the better days of college, the days of wealth. Like bright, brief pictures in the darkness the pageant of his yesterdays passed.

He turned the hot pillow. At last, throwing back the covers, he went to the window and lighted a cigarette. So his father had trusted too much—trusted life, and people, and himself. Then he had let him down. Life—and Morales. Yet, strangely, the word evoked not the austere face of the Spaniard, but the ivory-pale features of the girl. Illusive and haunting, she seemed to smile—but with a smile not wholly gay. Adela Morales. That, too, was past. Past before it had begun.

He may have slept. Suddenly he found himself sitting bolt upright, looking on the first red shafts of light that crept over the desert. That ache of loneliness had gone, and the long fight of the night had left him with a new sense of mastery. The path ahead lay clear. He was to carry on—to face whatever the future might bring.

A breeze from the window fanned his cheeks, bringing the promise of spring and the faint fragrance of jasmine. He breathed deeply, knowing the black night had forever passed, and with it the blackness of his pain. All life lay before him, bidding him build again. He would look a hostile world in the face and carve a place for himself. And then—his lips tightened—he would come to grips with the forces that had meant his father's ruin. And in some unreasoned way he felt that this too was part of his father's plans.

A servant brought fruit and coffee, and a half-hour later Ted found Bob on the porch, listening in amused silence to a very wrathful major. The old soldier was embellishing his talk with the hand-picked profanity of ten army generations.

As Radcliffe approached Bob smiled up at him. "The major has news for us. Tell him, Blount."

"It's about that damned Mexican captive. He got away!"

"But the fellow was wounded," protested Radcliffe. "He couldn't have got away!"

"Of course he couldn't. Not alone. He had help. Someone was keeping watch. All night someone must have kept watch—even while we were out there he may have had his eyes on us. Sweet piece of business, eh? The guard looked in at midnight and saw the greaser's boots sticking out beneath the blanket. He flashed on the light and the fellow lay there all quiet, with his eyes closed. Every two hours after that the guard looked in and the boots were still there. And this morning those damned boots were still there, but, by the Lord, that Mexican wasn't. He had taken them off, stuck them neatly outside the blanket, and vanished. Somebody came for him, smashed the lock, and carried him away." Again the old soldier called down eternal maledictions on his fortune. "He was our best bet, that peon—our only bet. And now he's gone. Vanished. And my wife is already spreading the news over Verdi as gleefully as if she just had a set of twins."

A sudden recollection turned the major's reddened face a delicate purple. "On the way out I met Dr. Price and told him about it. Do you know what he said?"

Both men shook their heads.

"He said, 'I thought someone would call for your captive.' Then why in hell didn't you say so last night?" I asked. "Oh, I never believe in interfering with military matters," he grinned back. That was the only answer I could get."

"It's uncanny," Blount burst out afresh. "That bandit has friends everywhere. We all know half the border people are in secret league with him. But here in Verdi—I never realized."

"My friend," Don Bob said solemnly, "you had better realize, if you ever expect to capture El Coyote. Your most secret plans are going to be known to him, your movements, your reports. He probably knows where you are at this moment. So, for you, major, I predict an interesting chase, but hardly predict success."

As if stung to instant action, the major rose and clattered down the steps to his horse. He climbed into the saddle and called back: "I'll lay you a dinner that before I'm done I capture or kill this all-seeing bandit of yours."

"Taken," laughed Don Bob. For a time he watched the retreating figure of the old soldier. "You know," he turned toward Ted—"I sometimes envy that man. Never once in his long past has he been assailed by doubts, either of himself or of his destiny. How simple all that must make life."

Ted nodded. "I wonder if life ever can be simple. Just now I was wondering how one begins to build it up again—in your words—from the very beginning."

"It's not so hard. Your father did it twice. I've done it. When I was just about your age my whole world was knocked from beneath my feet. And I got over it, although," he smiled his quiet smile—"some scars do remain."

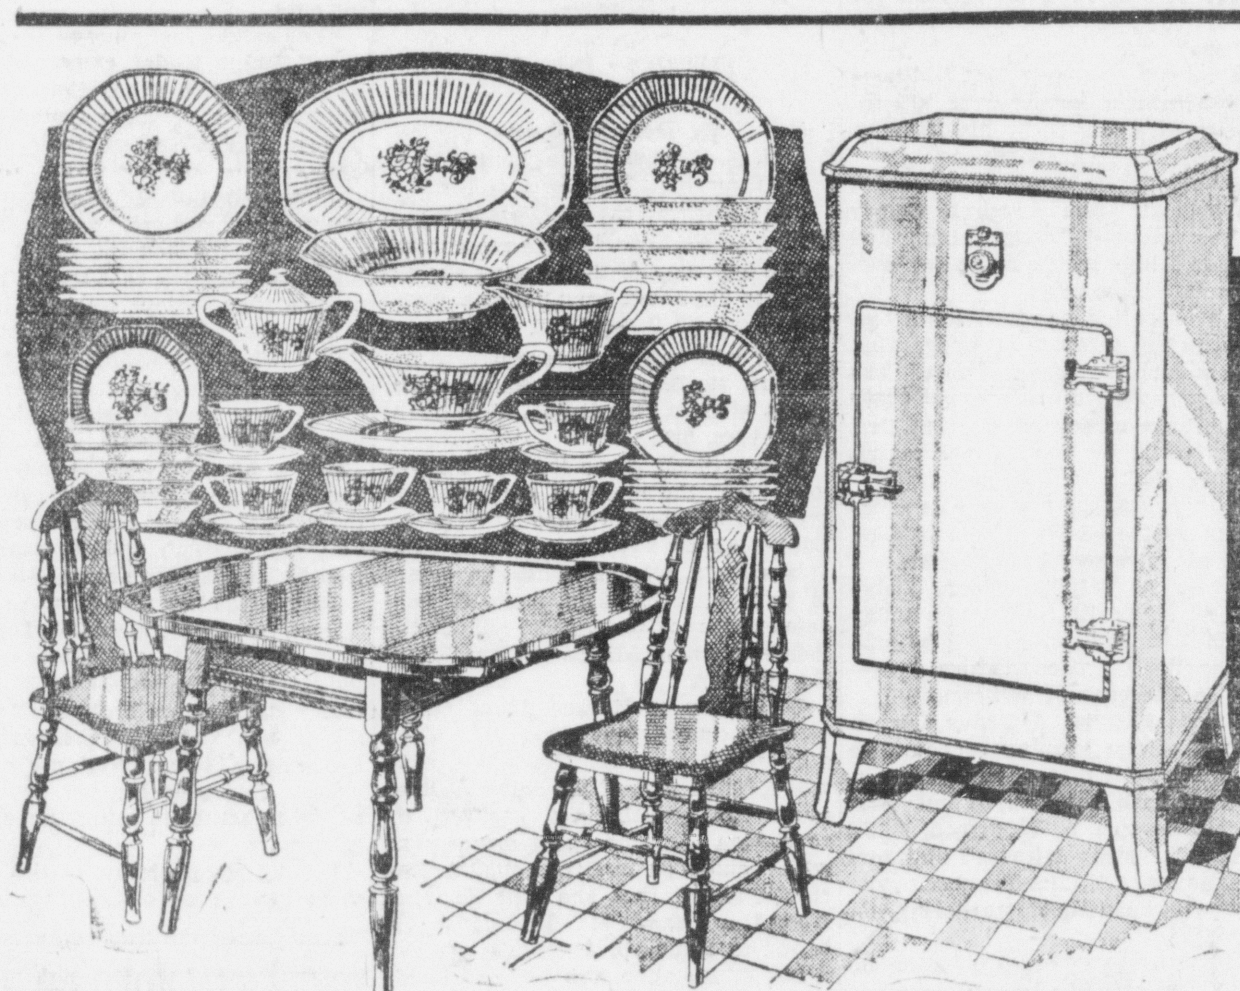

"I'm willing to face it—and the scars too. Only where do we begin? You know I'll never be willing just to live on you."

"Who wants you to? Perhaps I need you more than you need me. Yes, don't smile. Right now, Ted, I need a foreman, the kind of man I can make a partner of, that I can trust and bank on everlastingly. If you are your father's son, that man is you."

Radcliffe was looking out over the desert. For a moment his steady eyes softened. "I'm not going to try to thank you, Bob," he said at last. "But I wonder if I'd be a safe kind of foreman for anyone to take on just now. It came to me this morning that dad sent me out here as a test. I think he wants me to carry on the fight. I remember once he said, 'The greatest inheritance I could leave you would be a good scrap on your hands.' No, Bob, your new foreman sooner or later may clash with Morales."

"A fight with the power of Paco Morales should be big enough to suit anyone, but I think we could stand it. So let's call it sealed. Work for me and it will give you your best chance to get around and dig things out. For above all things you've got to avoid suspicion. Remember, there's no sacred regard for life out here—especially across the border. You'll be a great deal safer as one of my campfollowers, earning his day's wages."

TULLYTOWN A. A. WILL PLAY A. O. H. TONIGHT

(By T. M. June)

Tullytown A. A. will attempt to make it two straight tonight in Mouti's Hall when they meet Tom Holden's A. O. H. five from Bristol. In the preliminary game the Tullytown Reserves will play Capitol View.

Last Wednesday night Tullytown won its first game of the season in three starts when they downed the De Luxe Diners. They have dropped decisions to the Trenton Service Five and the Meadowbrook Club.

Manager Napoli will start the same team that has carried him throughout the young season. Lake and Lawler will be at the forward positions; Roe will jump center, with Connors and Rodgers as guards.

Tom Holden's quintet will be made up of the following: Ad Roe, Ed Dugan, M. Fallon, G. Dougherty, H. Brady and D. Ennis.

Al. Bauer, former Bristol boy, who has gained a reputation for his good officiating, will referee the fray, and has also consented to officiate at all future games at Tullytown.

The first game will begin at 8 o'clock.

BRISTOL HIGH VARSITY WINS FROM BRYN ATHYN

In a game which was as thrilling as it was fast, Bristol high varsity quintet handed Bryn Athyn a 22-15 setback on the home court, yesterday afternoon. The Cardinal and Gray Vees in the preliminary contest lost a hard-fought game to the Bryn Athyn Jay-Vees, 17-15.

At the foot of the whistle, Capt. Herman, getting the ball on a swift pass, looped the cords for a twin-pointer, which started the Cardinal and Gray on their march to victory. Bryn Athyn did not get started until the second half, in which they made their 15 points.

Bornice was high scorer for Bristol with four double-deckers and a foul goal, while Ebert and Brown, with four points each, were best for Bryn Athyn.

The Junior Varsity game was played with bull-dog spirit by Bristol, but after an extra period was played, to break the 15-15 tie, the bigger and more experienced Bryn Athyn five predominated.

Roe was high point gatherer for the Cardinal and Gray with six points. Holmes was high scorer for Bryn Athyn with two double-deckers and a single pointer.

The Cardinal and Gray varsity showed a great improvement in their passing, shooting and defensive games.

As far as is known, she has not conferred with Fletcher Stites, chief counsel for her brother, and is not living with her father, for whom she blames the feud that resulted in Donaldson's death.

Two Young Men Are Sent to Penitentiary

After admitting to a list of twenty-three robberies and burglaries, Stumpf was questioned as to whether or not he was not caught crawling out of the second story window of a Buckingham house about a year or more ago and he admitted it. At that time he was not prosecuted because of a plea made by his father.

After the stolen loot had been lifted, it was in most instances taken to the Fell home in Southampton where Mrs. Fell lived in the midst of it.

Character witnesses were called in behalf of Fell, the first being Mrs. Elizabeth Nash, of Feasterville, a sister, who said that she knew that her brother had gotten in with a "bad gang." She also said that she was sure that Fell's wife, whom he married two years ago, a woman of 51, was "a very bad influence over him." "She's an old scrapper and fighter, and not good company for anyone," Mrs. Nash declared.

Mrs. Fell was not in Court yesterday. It was stated that she is sick in bed at her home.

Other character witnesses for Fell included Mrs. Viola Burkhardt, of Fox Chase; Frank C. Worthington, who knew Fell since a baby and never knew him to do wrong; Horace P. Cornell, of Upper Southampton; Constable George Stockberger, Jr., who arrested Fell, stated that Fell's reputation for honesty had always been excellent up until this time; Deputy Sheriff Harry Ross, who said he never knew Charlie to get into trouble; William H. Yerkes, who wrote that Non-Such Farm, Buckingham, and a letter from Justice of the Peace William H. Yerkes, who wrote that Charlie had an excellent character but in his opinion got in with bad company.

Fell did not take the witness stand during the hearing. Mr. Ross, his attorney, explained to the court that Fell did not want to in any way hide behind the skirts of his wife, and that he thought that it was the manly thing for him to do.

After Mr. Ross had asked Judge Keller to suspend sentence on Fell, the Court remarked:

"Here we have a man pleading guilty to twenty-three offenses. What are we going to do? What would the public think if we would follow the suggestion of your counsel and suspend sentence? The public must have protection.

"The Court takes into consideration in the Fell case, what your character witnesses said in your behalf, and you are indeed very fortunate that you have had these good people to testify.

"As for Stumpf, you were not quite so fortunate, but we are going to take the stand that you too, had a good reputation before you got into this stealing and robbing. The Court does not like your manner though, you have not been frank.

"And here alone stands a mere boy, John Russell, without a lawyer—

A LAMP on the switch-board flashed—a call was in the making.

"I'm all alone and it's getting awfully hot!" a small frightened voice complained to the Night Operator when she plugged in the cord.

Immediately she sensed trouble. "Don't you worry," she reassured the child. "Somebody's coming!" and quickly she connected another line to police headquarters.

Within a few minutes a police car was at the child's home. It was none too soon. A valve on the furnace had jammed, the rescuers discovered, and the boiler was perilously near exploding.

alone. I hope that you will go straight in the future for I am releasing you on probation for three years."

Stumpf was sentenced on three bills, the sentences to run concurrently, and altogether amounting from five to ten years. For the robbery of the Frank V. Lamb place he received five to ten years; for the Cyrus Quinn robbery, three to six years; and for the robbery of 100 gallons of gasoline, one to two years. On twenty other bills, sentence was suspended.

Fell was also sentenced on three bills, sentences to run concurrently, and totaling three to six years. For the robbery of a roadside stand of Joseph Kuhns, he received three to six years; robbery of property of Dr. Joseph Turkington, three to six years; burglary of another home, three to six years. Sentence was suspended on the other charges.

at all. The work on this job is to be done by the unemployed under the supervision of the street committee.

The waterworks committee, which is headed by Frank Braker as chairman, has one of the most important projects on its hands—the erection of a new and larger standpipe. Last year council received bids for this work but because of finances the matter had to be laid over. It is expected that in the early Spring the committee will attempt to carry out this improvement. Other members on this committee are Frost, Young and Lair.

George W. Burdner is head of the ordinance committee, working with Hiram Johnston and John Bleasdale. This committee will be one of the first to function as it is necessary that an ordinance be drafted immediately fixing the salaries of the police and employees of the water works. This committee also is expected to present to council at some future date a zoning ordinance which Bleasdale worked on last year.

Arthur D. Forst, Jr., one of the newly elected members of council, is chairman of the finance committee. He has Burdner, Young and Bleasdale as associates. This committee will plan the budget and have charge of all finances and the municipally-owned buildings.

The sanitation and poor committee will have charge of the garbage collection this year, the change having been made at the last meeting. The street committee formerly had charge of the collection of garbage but at the suggestion of the new president, this was transferred to the sanitation committee which is headed by John G. Bleasdale. Lair and Forst are also on this committee.

The light committee, which is composed of Charles C. Young as chairman, together with Braker and Johnston, will have considerable work in this department. Improvements have just been made in the lighting system of the borough by the replacing of the 500 candle power lights and the placing of the smaller lamps on long mast arms. This improvement was made under the chairmanship of Braker.

Six Canal Bridges Are To Be Improved

Improvement of the six bridges will include widening to accommodate two cars. Curved approaches will be widened and super-elevated. The minimum under-clearance will be established at six feet to permit free passage, under the bridge, of boats and canoes. The six structures will be sufficiently strong to carry the legally authorized maximum load of 13 tons.

The six bridges to be improved are located as follows: Bridge just north of Washington Crossing; first bridge above New Hope; bridge in Washington Crossing; bridge between Erwinna and Uhlertown; bridge between Upper Black Eddy and Kintnersville; bridge in Yardley Borough.

phia, on grounds of cruel and barbarous treatment. They were married eighteen years ago and, according to the libel filed when the divorce was started, the respondent at one time shot a loaded revolver at his wife. That was only one of the numerous occasions when he mistreated her, it was alleged.

A divorce was granted to Catherine H. Arnwine, of Doylestown, from her husband, Charles H. Arnwine, of Newtown, on grounds of desertion. They were married in 1925.

Judge Keller handed down a decree in the case of Emma Clara Ludascher against Max C. H. Wandrer and Max C. H. Wandrer and Edith Marie Ludascher Wandrer, in the Court of Common Pleas, in which he ruled that owing to circumstances in the case being properly adjusted, no opinion was necessary.

Will You Help Those who are Willing to Work?

A number of men, women and girls of various vocations, who are willing to work but cannot find employment, have registered with the Bristol Unemployment Bureau.

Many of these have dependents and are the heads of families who find themselves in stringent circumstances during this time of depression.

A list of all such persons is available to those desiring the services of such a person or persons, regardless of the length of time for which such employment might be offered.

You are asked to make some sacrifice. Do your share by providing work for one or several days at your home or place of business.

If those who are able will give employment to these folks and thus aid them to earn that which they need, they will be accomplishing a two-fold purpose.
